Tips for People Who Want to Enact Positive Change in their Community

If you're looking to make a change in the world, your local community is a great place to start. You can positively impact many people in your immediate surroundings by connecting with and supporting your neighborhood. Not sure how to go about it? The tips below courtesy of OrangeCelebration provide some actionable tips and tools to get you started.

Start a Project to Benefit the Entire Community

Bringing people together with group projects is a great way to start building a stronger community.

- Start your own community garden, giving people the chance to get outdoors while growing healthy food. You can donate the produce to local charities.
- Challenge your neighborhood to get creative with a community art project, like a mural, sculpture walk, or live art demonstration.
- Set up a free library where community members can drop off and take books.

Establish a Local Nonprofit

A nonprofit can address essential needs in your community.

- Conduct a community needs assessment to pinpoint what services your local area could benefit from.
- Write a business plan to sketch out the details of how your nonprofit will be structured and operated.
- If possible, register your nonprofit as a limited liability company to simplify administrative tasks.
- Before you register your nonprofit as an LLC, check whether your state allows nonprofits to be LLCs.
- If you need to design a website for your nonprofit but are operating on a limited budget, you can find many reliable web professionals abroad in countries like India by searching Freelancer.com.
- Paying foreign workers is often cost-prohibitive, but there are low-fee money transfer services that are available. For example, if you need to pay remote workers in countries like Nepal, Remitly offers fees as low as $3.99 to send money.

Find Ways to Connect Neighbors

Sometimes all it takes is some simple connectivity to create a more nurturing community.

- Use apps and social media platforms to share news and alerts as a neighborhood.
- Organize a block party to bring people together and give newcomers a chance to get to know their neighbors.
- Set up a community charity drive to bring the neighborhood together.

Putting some effort into building a stronger, more connected community can help create a safer and more enjoyable space for everyone. Trust the resources above to help you make a positive change that you and those around you will benefit from.
